Dear Project Manager:

This is a custom message and I do not expect a response. I have certain ideas on this subject including subjects about water usage and tracking within municipalities to target water leaks; also, water reuse and reclamation that would help mitigate NEW water usage across several states. However, some questions that I think need to be asked include:

What is the allocation of water to each state and municipality? Any allocation to Mexico? Can we get an accounting of how that water is used?

Are we tracking where the water is used? The point of budgeting is to make sure that the precious water we have is going to the places we expect and not draining in places we don't know about or expect.

Can we explore large desalination plants in places between San Clemente and Oceanside to lessen the Southern California burden on the Lake Powell reserve of water?

These are questions that need answers so we can more expertly use the water from Lake Powell and make sure we are not wasteful of this precious resource.

Sincerely,

Marshall Kinnison
