My name is Alex Cunningham, and I am going to solve all the woes for everybody on the Colorado Watershed. It's real simple and easy to fix. Get the coastline involving California, Washington and Oregon, to simply put money into desalination. They have plenty of ocean water on their coasts that they can desalinate and fill every need for every person and their things; and give back to the rest of us!

There! Isn't that so simple?

They have the electricity to be able to do it, they have the money to invest in it, and if they did, we wouldn't be selling water to places it didn't need to go.

Yes, I know how water is being trucked from places like Denver Water to California.

So guess what? How we end this problem – we get every piece of coastline to heavily invest in water desalination, and our water and drought woes will be over.

If you wish, feel free to contact me for how this can be done at [REDACTED]

Have a wonderful day! Bye.
