SELECTED READINGS
IN THE HISTORY OF
THE BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

INTRODUCTION TO THE SELECTED READINGS LIST

Readers in the history of Reclamation will quickly learn that writers differ markedly on how to interpret its past. Historical accounts about the Bureau of Reclamation often, more so than for other Department of the Interior bureaus, have been colored sharply by their time and by the personal views of the author. Writers over time have perceived Reclamation as both hero and villain. Historical interpretation of Reclamation is a very complex task because a constantly evolving body of legislation, decisions, policies, and politics has combined with the changing economic health of the nation to shape Reclamation over nearly a century.

This “Selected Reading List” is an attempt to provide a starting point for readers interested in the history of Reclamation or the evolution of Western water policy and development. Various, occasionally extreme, points of view are represented in this list. Before arriving at final conclusions about the difficult public policy issues raised by Reclamation’s historic role in Western water development and management, the careful researcher will read fairly extensively. Charles Wilkinson’s Crossing the Next Meridian contains a brief overview of Reclamation’s history and evolution that is generally good, and readers might find that a useful place to begin looking at Reclamation’s history.

Primary and original records related to Bureau of Reclamation history. Unlike the situation with most other Federal agencies, researchers in the history of Reclamation will find the Bureau of Reclamation’s historic records concentrated in one location — the National Archives and Records...
Administration (NARA) branch on the Denver Federal Center in Lakewood, Colorado. Records held there include over 8,000 cubic feet of material which include correspondence, memoranda, project histories, construction notes, drawings, plans and maps, and photographs. More recent Reclamation records of interest to researchers are held in Reclamation offices in Washington, D.C. and Denver, regional offices, area offices, and field offices.

In addition, the records of the Secretary of the Interior and of other Federal agencies may be useful research sources. These records are located in NARA in College Park, Maryland, and in various Federal offices and NARA branches in the West.

Reclamation also has an active history research program aimed at writing brief narrative histories of each Reclamation project and obtaining oral history interviews with a broad range of Reclamation employees. While available through the history program, these materials are also deposited at the Department of the Interior’s Library and the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., the Beineke Library at Yale University, the Western History Collection of the Denver Public Library, the Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming, the Newberry Library in Chicago, the Huntington Library in San Marino, California, and the Water Archives at the University of California in Berkeley.

Brit Allan Storey
Senior Historian
Bureau of Reclamation
P. O. Box 25007
Denver, Colorado 80225-0007
(303) 445-2918
bstorey@do.usbr.gov
fax: (303) 445-6470
Revised April 2000

Learn more about Reclamation’s history program:  http://www.usbr.gov/history
Learn more about Reclamation and its programs:  http://www.usbr.gov

SELECTED READING LIST:
THE BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

This selected reading list represents a small percentage of the literature available on the Bureau of Reclamation. It is intended to provide a starting point for reading and research in the history of Reclamation.

SELECTED READINGS

Idaho Yesterdays 30 (Spring/Summer 1986). This special issue of the journal is devoted to Idaho water history.

Udall, Stewart L. Interviews by Joe B. Frantz, 1969, Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, Austin, Texas.

