

Good News at Last

The news which arrived from Washington late last week that the completed plans and specifications for the Davis Dam project on the Colorado river provide for the construction of the power plant and headquarters on the Arizona side of the river is acceptable news, particularly after the strenuous efforts that have been made by the board of supervisors and all our citizens to cooperate with the government in this federal project.

The assurance that the bids for the construction of this immense dam will be opened at Kingman, Friday, May 15, is evidence that Mohave county is in line to receive some of the benefits of this gigantic construction project. It is certainly a worth while answer to the valiant and continued efforts of our official and private citizens to obtain their rightful part of the benefits of this government project.
