

Among the stories that never find their way into print is one which might be headlined: "Expansion of speakeasy to meet growing business, forces Red Cross to seek new quarters!" Somewhere in that story there's a moral—perhaps you can figure it out.