

'Magnificent,' Says Oliver Of Alabama

"Magnificent!" That's a one-word description of Boulder dam from the lips of Congressman William B. Oliver, of Alabama, after he had visited the great Colorado river project yesterday, in company with Congressman J. G. Scrugham and party.

"Yes, indeed, it's a big job, and I was agreeably surprised at its magnitude and the progress being made in its construction," said Oliver, who, continuing, declared, "and it means unlimited possibilities for Las Vegas."

Congressman Oliver, who is chairman of the sub-committee on appropriations, left last night for Washington.
