

Heavy Rain Sweeps On Boulder City

615/34

A heavy rain swept down on Boulder City shortly before noon today, pelting the dam city with a generous amount of precipitation which has been sadly lacking during the spring.

A small deluge was loosed in the first visit of the rain and since that time intermittent showers have cooled things off nicely.

Frank T. Crowe, general superintendent for Six Companies, said that while the rain was quite heavy, it would not interfere with work on the job.
