

Walker R. Young Is in Sacramento

Walker R. Young, construction engineer of the Boulder canyon project for the bureau of reclamation, has left for Sacramento, California, it was learned today.

Young's departure for the locale of the central valleys project was sudden, and Ralph Lowry, who is acting in the capacity of construction engineer in Young's absence, stated that Young went on business. It is understood that Young's appointment as head of the new project, said to be in the offing, has not yet been made.

Lowry stated this morning that Young expected to be gone for several days.