10-18-35
Walker R. Young, construction engineer of the Boulder canyon project for the bureau of reclamation, has returned to Boulder City after having spent several days in Sacramento, California, in connection with the proposed Central valleys project.

Young, accompanied by John L. Savage, designing engineer of the bureau of reclamation, and L. H. McLellan, reclamation official, both of whom are from the Denver office, have been making a field examination, Young stated this morning.

Young said that transfer papers regarding his leaving to be chief of the Central valleys project had not yet come through from Washington, and that he did not know when he would leave the Boulder canyon project.
