

A. G. Fleury Dies Suddenly At Boulder City After Heart Attack

A. Gayle Fleury, 46, prominent Boulder City resident, died suddenly at his home, 713 Utah street, Boulder City, at 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Death was caused by a heart attack.

Yesterday Fleury complained to friends that he had a severe pain over his heart, and believed that he was suffering from indigestion. He lay on the lawn of his home for some time yesterday afternoon, and later went into the house. T. R. Week, who lives in Fleury's home, stated at the inquest that he saw the man through the window, sitting as though he were asleep. Later, when he went into the house, he discovered that Fleury was dead, whereupon he notified a doctor and dam community officials.

An inquest was held at the Fleury home at 4:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon, with Justice of the Peace A. J. Nelson officiating. Members of the coroner's jury were F. F. Carver and Dr. Morse Little. They came to the conclusion that Fleury's death was the result of coronary occlusion. Present at the inquest were Glen Walter, superintendent of maintenance at Boulder City, who was Fleury's employer; and John Abercrombie and Fred C. Miller, of the American Legion, as well as numerous friends.

Fleury's wife, Agnes, died here about two years ago. He is survived by three brothers, R. Fleury and Paul Fleury of Detroit, and M. S. Fleury of Wisconsin; and his father-in-law, C. J. Elliott, of 907 West Manchester, Los Angeles, who was notified and was expected to arrive in Boulder City today to make arrangements for the funeral. Remains are at Garrison's mortuary in Las Vegas.

Fleury was born at Charlotte, Michigan, on May 9, 1892, bureau of reclamation records show. He came to Boulder City on March 17, 1931, from Los Angeles, and has made his home here since that time. During his residence here, he has been employed by the bureau of reclamation, first as laborer, then as mechanic, and, at the time of his death, as a subforeman in street repair work. He is an army veteran and was a member of Boulder City post number 31 of the American Legion. He also belonged to the Black Canyon country club and was prominent in its activities.
