

National Legion Commander Asked To Visit Boulder

National Committeeman
Malone Attends Meeting; Dr. Haas Joins

A visit from National Committeeman George W. Malone, and extending of an invitation to National Commander Stevens to visit the Boulder City post of the American Legion featured Thursday evening's meeting of the group, the first meeting held since the presentation of the charter.

Malone, who is state engineer for Nevada, was accompanied by Fred McCarthy of Reno post, and Leonard Blood, member of the Las Vegas post and director of employment for the United States government for the Hoover dam project.

Commander Stevens was invited to stop over at Boulder during his western trip.

Refund of poll tax is due ex-service men who are drawing compensation, according to officers of the Legion post. Several already have secured the refund through H. B. Lawton of the Boulder post.

Doctor Haas was signed up as a new member of the organization at the Thursday meeting.
