

Tourists May Camp In Tents, Ely Says

3
Tourist visiting Hoover dam project will be permitted to camp in tents, which they have brought with them, in the two Boulder City Auto camps.

This camping will not be affected by the April 1st rule that all persons occupying tents or tent-place of residence must move into houses on the reservation as their permanent houses by that date, according to Sims Ely, city manager of Boulder City.

The two auto camp grounds are conducted by Goodrich and Vaughn respectively, and are located on the Nevada highway at the entrance to Boulder City.

Goodrich has been enlarging his establishment continuously having leased more ground this week.

Camping will be permitted as soon as sanitary conveniences have been completed for the camps.
