

Nippon Engineers Study Dam Project

Two Japanese engineers from the construction department of the Japanese government railways are on the Boulder Dam project this week making a study of scientific and engineering matters in Black canyon and Boulder City.

They are Michihiko Inaba and Kanji Watanabe, both of Tokio.

The men are equipped for taking photographs, as well as notes on their observations. They will be here for about a week.