

Boulder Band Has New Members Now

Boulder City's band has several new members, according to H. C. Looze, who returned recently from a week's trip to the coast.

Looze, who announces the arrival of a new bass drum and of some music, names the following new members:

Morgan Mills, son of Chief Earle Mills of the bureau of reclamation, bass saxophone. He played with the Ellensburg, Washington, high school and municipal bands.

Ted Nebbe, clarinet. Four years with the high school band of Santa Rosa, Calif.

Charles D. Fechser, of Smith's root beer stand, drums. Played with Brigham Young University band and U. S. A. Infantry band.

T. G. Watson, alto horn. Played with the United Railway band of St. Louis.

Al Wallace, alto saxophone. Played with the Los Angeles municipal band.

Dave White, bass horn. Played with the Las Vegas municipal band and Union Pacific band.

Ross Boyack, tenor saxophone. Played with Brigham Young University band.

S. M. Craig, clarinet. Played with University of Illinois band, also in vaudeville.
