

Believe It Or Not, They Wished For Summertime

Those who link the name "Boulder City" with heat of desert sun, in far cities, should have seen the community yesterday afternoon!

Not only was the air filled with snowflakes, but those snowflakes were traveling southward in almost horizontal course in a stiff wind that sent everyone scurrying indoors for an hour or more.

The snow did not last, however, hardly whitening the ground. It did not leave a sheet of white on the ground as did the snow of a night of some few weeks ago. But it was wintry, nonetheless, and, strange as it may sound, some were heard to remark they wished it were summer again!
