

Worker At Dam May Lose Use Arm

7/12/63
Bob Horton, former employee of the reclamation bureau, now connected with Babcock-Wilcox, may lose the use of his right arm as a result of a peculiar accident in one of the Boulder damitories of the company about seven o'clock last night.

Horton fell and shoved his arm thru a window, severing an artery and several ligaments on the glass.

He was immediately dispatched to the hospital where doctors expressed doubt as to whether he would recover the use of the injured member.
