

Six Company Man Killed In Fall

12/7/33
L. A. Roach, 33, Six Companies employee, was instantly killed at 11:30 last night when he plunged head first from the top of the "jumbo" in diversion tunnel number three, dashing his brains out on the concrete below.

According to fellow workmen, they were changing shifts, and Roach had just climbed the jumbo to begin his night's work on graveyard shift. Without warning, he apparently lost his hold and fell, his body being badly broken by the impact.

No one saw the accident closely enough to tell just how it occurred and how Roach happened to lose his hold.

Deceased is single and resided in the dormitories. Remains are at the Park Mortuary in Boulder City awaiting funeral instructions.
