

Boulder Worker Is Crushed By Truck

The inquest into the death yesterday of Jim Tocci, Boulder dam workman, who was crushed beneath the wheels of a truck about 12:40 yesterday afternoon, will be held this afternoon by Judge Frank M. Ryan.

Tocci, according to witnesses, was walking along the road leading from the portal of number four diversion tunnel, at the same time a loaded truck was proceeding in the same direction over the same road.

The truck driver noticed Tocci as the front end of the truck went on by, and he apparently was in the clear. For some inexplicable reason, Tocci walked into the rear end of the truck and was crushed to death under the back wheels.

When fellow-workmen reached the scene, he was dead, his body being badly mangled.

Tocci's remains are at the Boulder City funeral parlors awaiting results of an attempt to reach his wife in Chicago. Up to noon today, there had been no response to wires sent to her last known address.