

B. C. Man Nabbed As Liquor Runner

Harry Boulwara, Boulder dam worker, tried to run the gate with a cache of liquor in his auto last night, reservation officers said this morning, and he was arrested and will face W. J. Flowers, U. S. Commissioner late this afternoon.

Boulwara, according to the officers, had 24 pints of liquor, wrapped in packages of fours, in the rear end of his car, hidden beneath old rags. When he was arrested he disclaimed ownership of the liquor, declaring that someone must have put it there when he was absent, police said.
