Thirty flashy army planes from March field will zoom over Boulder City and Black canyon about mid-day Saturday, then land in Las Vegas . . .

The army pilots' basketball team will tangle with the Boulder Avalanche in Boulder City early in the evening . . .

And, immediately following the game, the famous "March Field Melody Masters," 10-piece military orchestra, will play for informal ball at the Messhall in Boulder City, officially ringing down the curtain on the basketball season.

Two squadrons of planes, five bombers and 25 fast pursuit ships, will carry 13 members of the team, 10 members of the orchestra, and 25 flying corps officers, winging their way from Riverside Saturday mid-day for this big combined visitation and invasion of the dam, Boulder City and Las Vegas

AFTER FLYING over Boulder City and the dam site, the planes will fly over Las Vegas and land at the Western Air Express airport.

The 48 or 50 men in the party will see the dam project during Saturday afternoon, will play the Boulder City Athletic club hoop team at 7:30 p. m., after dinner at Anderson's messhall, and then will attend the dance, according to plans announced by officers of the club.

THEY WILL RETURN to Las Vegas after the dance, where they will spend the night, returning to their base at Riverside Sunday.

Manager Fred Booth of the athletic club talked by phone with the assistant manager of athletics at March field last evening and completed all details of arrangements.

The army men stated Boulder Cityites might watch the skies for them about 12 to 1 o'clock Saturday noon. Inasmuch as this will be the largest group of army planes or other planes, for that matter, ever to fly over Boulder City, it is expected a large share of the populace will be out to view the exhibition of formation flying.

The Six Companies tennis, basketball court, north of dormitory three, will be prepared especially for this final game of the season,
