

NOW Whose Ford? Henry Finds Ticket

Now whose Ford will it be? Roy Henry found the long-lost ticket, the one that won the Ford sedan awarded at the Christmas party of the Vets.

W. Blackburn had been unable to substantiate his claim to the car on account of the fact that he had not paid for the ticket until after the contest closed.

And Henry had been unable to substantiate his on account of the fact that he had thrown his ticket away after hearing another man had won.

Hence the hearing the other night with promise of continuing the hearing at 4:30 p. m. today. There had been some whisperings of giving the car to the Red Cross if neither man was able to prove his claim. But the finding yesterday of the missing ticket, by Henry, changes the aspect of the situation, it is admitted.

The jury which will decide the matter comprises Walker R. Young, Sims Ely and G. E. Bodell. The man who sold Henry the ticket insists Henry paid for the ticket, and that fact is proved by the name "Roy" which he wrote on the stub with carpenter's pencil with notation "river camp."
