Subject: America's National Parks Deserve Consideration and Participation in Colorado River Basin Decisions!

Dear Pam Adams,

I wish to express my comments regarding the Bureau of Reclamation's Colorado River Basin Water Demand and Supply Study on the demands and priorities for the Colorado River. I am a citizen who regularly uses our national parks and I am most concerned that our national parks are not being given the necessary priority and concern they deserve in any consideration regarding the use of the Colorado River. Our parks are national treasures and should be given top priority in studies that include those rivers that pass within or adjacent to park boundaries.

It is imperative that our parks and waterways be preserved for present and future generations of Americans. Business interests - corporate or private - should take a back seat to the preservation and enjoyment of our parks and rivers. Our federal government should be protecting the interests of the general public in matters of natural resource use, not those with profit-making interests. Please give our parks the consideration they deserve and ensure that their preservation in an absolute natural state is maintained. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gerard McGloin
