Subject: America's National Parks Deserve Consideration and Participation in Colorado River Basin Decisions!

Dear Pam Adams,

For any study to be completely relevant all variables and parties involved must be included. To over-represent those who drain the Colorado River for commercial reasons (farming in areas not meant for farming or feeding cities like Las Vegas) and to under-represent National Parks and Recreation Areas who border or access the River makes this report incomplete and reek of favoritism.

Please remember our national treasures when assessing impact on resources like the Colorado River. This river is abused by many and I drink water from it daily a few hundred miles away. I don't think that the CAP project was a good idea. It made over-populating the Sonoran Desert a huge money maker while all involved know that this population cannot be sustained indefinitely in the region.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jerry Radford
