Subject: Notification of Change in Business Practice Used to Calculate Central Valley
Project (CVP) Capital and Deficit Water Rates

Dear Water Contractor:

Beginning in water year 2006, the Bureau of Reclamation is modifying its business practice used to calculate the CVP capital and deficit components of the cost of service water rates. The purpose of this change in practice is to use more realistic delivery data in setting water rates based on the capability of the CVP to deliver water and historical data. Use of more realistic delivery data will provide for an even recovery of the CVP capital and deficit amounts owed by water contractors by 2030 consistent with congressional direction in Public Law 99-546. The draft 2006 CVP water rates were released on September 30, 2005. We are requesting your comments on this change in business practice by November 4, 2005.

Change in Business Practice

Originally, Reclamation's water rates were computed on the assumption that water contractors would take their full contract entitlement, as adjusted for certain factors. Historically, however, Reclamation has not been able to deliver full contract entitlements due to hydrologic conditions, demand, system constraints, and other factors. Consequently, when actual water deliveries were less than contract entitlements, the amount of capital and deficit recovered was less than projected. Reclamation is modifying its business practice in order to recover the remaining capital costs and deficit amounts in a more constant payment stream by 2030.

In consulting with the Central Valley Project Water Association Financial Affairs Committee (CVPWA FAC) over the past several years, Reclamation has evaluated a number of different options for refining its business practice for recovering CVP capital costs and deficits via water rates. The refined selected business practice, developed in concert with the majority of CVPWA FAC members, incorporates a two-step process as follows:

- (1) Uses the California Simulation Model (CAL SIM) used for CVP operations, criteria, and plan purposes as the basis for: (a) allocating capital costs between municipal and industrial (M&I) and irrigation; and (b) prorating capital costs to individual water contractors within each function. Note: Since Friant-Kern Canal and Madera Canal contractors were not included as part of the CAL SIM model, Class 1 water for these service areas will be developed based on average actual deliveries for the period 1989 to 2003. Class 2 (irrigation only) will be 39.3%, based on delivered water during the same time period as the CAL SIM Model.
- (2) Calculates applicable capital and deficit component water rates based on each water contractor's obligation (capital and deficit) divided by their cumulative average annual water deliveries from 1995 forward. However, for certain water contractors, historical deliveries do not provide a reasonable basis for setting water rates. Consequently, Reclamation is proposing a variation in the delivery basis for these water contractors, as follows:
 - o Long-term contractors taking no or very little water annually: The lowest recorded annual delivery percentage by water type (irrigation or M&I) will be used. To date, the lowest recorded percentages of delivered water (as compared to contract entitlement) were 31.6% for irrigation and 37.6% for M&I.
 - o Sacramento River contractors: Annual water delivery projections will be based on 75% of contract entitlement to correspond to the language in the renewal contracts with these contractors.

Water Rates Using Modified Business Practice

The 2006 CVP water rates which incorporates this new business practice are available on our website at <http://www.usbr.gov/mp/cvpwaterrates>. Please note that the effect on water contractors who take all or close to their contract entitlement is anticipated to be minimal, while the effect on other water contractors could be significant. These rates are only applicable to CVP water contractors who have renewed or amended their contracts.

As stated previously, we request that you submit any comments on the change in business practice to Mr. Larry Bauman, Ratesetting Services Manager, by November 4, 2005. Comments may be submitted via email to lbauman@mp.usbr.gov or via letter to the above address. If you have any questions on the water rate calculations, please contact Mr. John Pelley, at 916-978-5364 or jpelley@mp.usbr.gov.

Sincerely,

“Signed by John Davis”
