

Welcome to the Mid-Pacific Region's New Regional Director, David Murillo

Regional Director David Murillo

The Mid-Pacific Region's new Regional Director, David Murillo, and his wife, Terri, already had to make a difficult 2,700-mile move from Washington, DC, to Sacramento, Calif., but David still has one more move ahead of him: into his new office at the Federal Building, 2800 Cottage Way, on Wednesday, January 2, 2013.

Originally from Yakima, Washington, David graduated from Washington State University with a Bachelor of Science in mechanical engineering in 1984. He joined Reclamation's Pacific Northwest Region in 2000 as Manager of the Yakima Field Office after working for the Departments of Defense and Energy.

From 2006 through 2010, David was the Power Manager for the Grand Coulee Power Office, managing the Grand Coulee and Hungry Horse dams and powerplants. Commissioner Michael Connor selected David to be his Deputy Commissioner for Operations in September 2010. David and Terri have three children: Joshua 25, Brittany 23, and Taylor 21.

As the Deputy Commissioner for Operations, David spent a lot of time focusing on Mid-Pacific Regional issues with Commissioner Connor, former Regional Director Don Glaser, Deputy Regional Director Pablo Arroyave and other Regional leaders. And after two years in the Nation's capitol working closely with members of Congress, he's developed a number of solid political relationships that will undoubtedly be valuable to him as the Regional Director. In other words, David is ready, willing and quite able to take on the responsibilities of his new position!

Welcome to the Mid-Pacific Region, David!
