SAGEBRUSH HILLS DOCS Saturday, Nov. 3, 2018

Join us in the basement of the Gilbert Cellars tasting room for a glass (or two!) of wine and an intimate afternoon of documentaries, fueled discussion. We will screen two documentaries, each followed by a speaker or panel and a Q&A session. These films and their subjects may leave you inspired or aghast, but you will certainly be engaged and informed.

In partnership with regional water interests and stakeholders, our state has been instrumental in developing water solutions for the Yakima River Basin.

The Yakima Basin Integrated Water Management Plan offers a commonsense approach to solving decades of water conflicts in the Yakima River Basin. It offers a 30-year vision for responding to drought and changing climate, assuring water is clean and ample, and lands are both protected and productive for growing communities and the natural environment.

PRESENTING!...

YBIP 2018 Highlights!

Welcome to the Yakima Basin Integrated Plan Highlights

Since 2013, participants in the Yakima Basin Integrated Plan including irrigation districts, the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation, environmental groups, the City of Yakima, State and Federal agencies, county governments, and others have made great strides in achieving water reliability and resource improvements for people, farms, and fisheries in one of Washington State's most important watersheds. Dedicated participants from these groups form the Yakima River Basin Water Enhancement Workgroup.

Highlights of these accomplishments are presented inside and would not have been possible without the collaboration and funding support from the Bureau of Reclamation and the Washington State Department of Ecology.

Reclamation and Ecology are committed to advancing the Integrated Plan's 30-year water strategy in collaboration with the Yakima River Basin Water Enhancement Workgroup and its various committees.
